MONDAY EVENING, OCTOBER 4.

The New York Herald yesterday printed a quintuple sheet with supplement.

We hope all our Mahonite readers who have heretofore been democrats will carefully peruse the letter Mr. Hopkins, the chairman of the readjuster executive committee of Rockingham county, has addressed to the members of his party in that county. It is the sensible letter of a sensible man, and must of necessity be effective upon sensible readers. It shows that the writer while a conscientious believer in the principle of readjustment, knows the time and place at which to apply that principle, and that it has nothing whatever to do with the election of a President or member of Congress, and that he is no democrat who allows that principle to prevent him from voting the regular democratic ticket.

Elections will be held in Colorado to-morrow, in Georgia on Wednesday, and in Indiana, Ohio and West Virginia to-morrow week. Colorado will probably go republican, though it is by no means certain. In Georgia no republican ticket is being run, the republicans there voting with the bolting democrats for Norwood, but everybody concedes that Colquhoun, regular democratic candidate for Governor, will be elected by a large majority, and that a Legislature will be chosen favorable to the election of ex-Governor Brown to the Senate. With regard to Ohio, Indiana and West Virginia, the latter, in all probability, will go democratic, and many think Ohio will go the same way. Should this be so the result of the presidential election will be known three weeks before that election is held.

The republican press are continually harping to the tune that government bonds have been declining ever since democratic prospects improved. This isn't so, but if it were the republicans who assert it would be giving themselves away no less, for from their own standpoint, it would show that their battle has already been fought and lost, as bonds don't steadily decline without a cause. The election of Gen. Hancock will not lower prices of bonds, though if it would produce that effect they are already versed in human nature who don't know that he would be elected by an overwhelming majority; but the radicals when they assert that it will produce that effect concede his election by saying that the depreciation has already commenced.

Ex-Secretary A. H. H. Stuart, in his admirable letter to the Virginia democratic association of Washington, published by us last Saturday, especially refers to the warning of Washington in his farewell address against the danger to the country that would arise "from the efforts of designing men to excite a belief in the minds of the people that there is a real difference in local interests," and points the moral by the recent speech of Mr. Conkling, in which that apostle of sectional hatred, and spokesman of the republican party "proclaims the unending hostility of those he represents to nearly one half of his countrymen." Washington, he said, "desired a union founded on mutual respect and esteem, but Conkling and those for whom he speaks seem to desire the involuntary union of the chain gang, their primary object seeming to be to render alien to each other those who ought to be bound together by fraternal affection. Then continuing, he says "the issue between these opposing systems—between the teachings of Washington and the dogmas of Conkling have been forced on the American people, Garfield, at the bidding of his haughty dictator, has chosen to descend from his former conservative position, and become the representative of discord and sectional hatred, Hancock, on the other hand, is the champion of peace, of the prospects of Washington and of that unity which springs from devotion to our whole country." Mr. Stuart is one of the few remaining representatives of good old line whig conservatism, moderation and conciliation, and his words are those of a wise man, who, having passed his three score years and ten, is more solicitous now about the prosperity of his country than his own, and is anxious that his countrymen should profit by the knowledge he has acquired through a long and active life spent in studying, observing and practicing statesmanship; and judging from the depreciation Mr. Conkling's speech has received from the conciliators and more moderate men of the republican party, it would seem that their estimation of that speech differs but little from that of Mr. Stuart's. Why, then, aware as they are of the evils likely to ensue from the adoption of Mr. Conkling's policy, don't they join Mr. Stuart in his effort to secure its emphatic rejection?

Mr. Newberry, who, though a pronounced readjuster, agreed to support the regular democratic ticket provided the democrats of the 9th district would make no nomination for Congress and vote for him against Fulkerson, the Mahonite candidate, and who has been stumping his district against the Mahonites, now that the democrats have nominated Mr. Trigg, seeing that he has no chance of election, withdraws from the canvass, and says he would rather be a doorknocker in the house of the Mahonites than the nominee of the democratic convention, and that he and all his friends will vote the Mahonite ticket. All of which places Mr. Newberry in a very ridiculous position.

Here's another case in which the radicals falsify their words and break their promises to the negroes. Ex-Senate Senator Mosely, a highly respected colored man, has been nominated by the republicans of his (the seventh) district for Congress, but instead of supporting him the white republicans of that district give him the cold shoulder and say he cannot unite the strength of his party. Of course he can't, and there never has been a negro candidate for any important office in Virginia who either could or did receive the votes of all the white republicans. To the radicals the negroes are good enough to vote, but not good enough to be voted for.

FROM WASHINGTON.

Special Correspondence of the Alexandria Gazette.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 4, 1880.

The receipts at the Treasury to day from customs amounted to $616,533; from internal revenue, $693,571—over a million and a quarter; and still Mr. Garfield says the tariff on sugar and salt and blackets and most everything that poor people use shall not be reduced.

The National Board of Health received a dispatch from Key West, Florida, this morning, stating that one genuine case of yellow fever had just been announced there. The board doesn't anticipate any spread of the disease, as the season is too far advanced for it to get any foothold now.

Not only all the clerks but every other man who can put a radical ballot in a box in Indiana and Ohio have been started for those States, the money requisite for their expenses being supplied by the republicans. The clerks are allowed ten days holiday. Reduced fares are obtained through the influence of prominent radicals with the different railroad companies.

Superintendent Garly, of the free delivery service, is desirous of extending that service, and will ask an extra appropriation of $200,000 for that purpose at the next session of Congress.

D. D. Lum, the ex-assistant secretary of the greenback national executive committee, whose assertion that Mr. Weaver has sold out to the radicals is denied by Mr. Weaver, informed your correspondent this morning that he could prove every word he had said; that when Mr. Jones was appointed financial agent of the committee Mr. Durant would have nothing more to do with it; that Jones has never made any report of the money he has collected and disbursed; that Weaver had telegraphed Jones to send $1,000 to him in Alabama, stating in the dispatch that if they made a good showing there they would be in a condition to make large collections; and that Weaver had told Gibson, of the New York Sun, that he had gotten a retainer of $10,000 for assisting the republicans, and was to receive $15,000 more. He also showed us a letter from Mr. Jewell, chairman of the republican national executive committee, telling him to come on to New York at his (Jewell's) expense.

Senator Wallace's son was in the city last night. He says that his father is confident that Pennsylvania will go democratic, that Blaine acknowledges Garfield's defeat when in Philadelphia, and that Don Cameron has no hand in the fight and has gone to California for no other purpose but to get out of it.

Letters received here from various portions of Virginia represent the prospects of the democrats there as very favorable. It is said that but 20,000 negroes in the whole State have paid their capitation tax and that all of them will vote the straight republican ticket; that a greater percentage of them have paid their tax in Petersburg than anywhere else in the State, owing to the exertions of Jorgensen, the republican candidate for Congress in that district, but that even there their vote will be comparatively small, though as the Mahonites are stronger there than anywhere else they will probably carry that city; that Caroline county, in the Richmond district, will give 500 majority for Capt. George D. Wise, the democratic nominee for Congress, and in short that the democrats will sweep the State and stand a good chance of carrying even the black districts. Mr. Shober, the assistant clerk of the Senate, has returned, and says the talk about there being any danger of North Carolina is all hosh, as North Carolina is just as safe for Hancock as Alabama.

Mr. Cressy has been appointed postmaster at Robertson's, Bedford county, Va., vice J. W. Robertson, resigned.

The republican congressional campaign committee, whose headquarters are here and who have been in favor of the plan of no fight for the electoral vote of Virginia so that votes for Garfield could be traded for votes for the republican candidates for Congress, were considerably disappointed by the circular of the national executive committee in New York ordering a vigorous campaign for the electoral vote of that State, but as the latter committee is conducting the campaign the former has to give way, but they do it with bad grace and say both the congressional and presidential tickets in the State are lost in consequence.

A dispatch was received at the Treasury to-day from Georgia, stating that indictments had been found against thirty-eight illicit distillers, twenty of whom were engaged in the recent assault upon Deputy Collector Stuart. Messrs. Blaine and Conkling say that illicit distillers conduct their operations with impunity in the South, but surely this isn't so, when thirty-eight of them are thus brought up with a turn at one time.

All the preparations and arrangements for the grand agricultural display to take place here to-morrow have been made, and the parade will, it is said, exceed anything of the kind previously seen in this city.

Mr. Speaker Randall has appointed Watson Boyle, son of the late Major Boyle, well known during the war as provost marshal at Knoxville, his private secretary, vice young Mr. Tucker, deceased.

Rev. Dr. Ballock, chaplain of the Senate and pastor of the Union Presbyterian Church of Alexandria, has rented a house in this city and will occupy it in a short time. The doctor's congregation refused to accept his resignation, but the Presbytery to which he belongs will dissolve the connection at its next meeting, and the doctor will then reside here. He will not take up his residence here, however, until after the election for while he is in no conceivable sense a party man, and has not voted for many years he deems the success of the democratic party at this time so necessary to the defeat of sectionalism and the restoration of peace and unity between all sections of the country, that he will remain in Alexandria until after the election in order that he may cast a ballot for the national ticket.

Max Walter, a well digger at Buffalo, N. Y., fell to the bottom of a deep well the other day, and was impaled by a large stick, which went completely through his body, coming out at his back, but got out without assistance and was alive at last accounts.

POLITICAL.

DISCUSSION IN KING GEORGE COUNTY.

[Correspondence of the Alexandria Gazette.]
SHILOH, VA., Oct. 1.—The first public demonstration in this county in the pending presidential campaign occurred at our Court House yesterday. At an early hour the members of the Hancock and English Club assembled and erected a handsome pole, eighty feet high, from the top of which, a few minutes later, a magnificent flag was hoisted to the breeze, bearing on its ample folds the stars and stripes with the names of the democratic standard bearers, Hancock and English, on one side, and on the reverse side "Electoral Ticket of 19th May." This last inscription was wisely designed by our county chairman to avoid all taint of suspicion that our new flag floated under the auspices of that bogus nest of democrats now known only as Mahonites.

At a later hour the people were called into the court house to hear an address from Mr. Geo. A. Mushbach, of your city, who was present by special invitation of the Hancock and English Club.

The Mahonites had not previously announced any intention of entering a speaker on this occasion, but it turned out one had been provided in the person of Mr. Seddon, of Fredericksburg. Arrangements were soon made for a division of time, and Mr. Mushbach led off in a speech of a half hour, devoted mainly to an exhibit of the present shameful and anomalous position which the Mahonite wing of the democracy in Virginia occupied, and forecasting the line of argument he should pursue in his second speech to prove that they alone were responsible for the existing breach in the democratic column, and in the course they were now pursuing are only doing the ridiculous part of a side show to the radical circus.

Mr. Seddon then took the stand and occupied the hour assigned him in a rebuff of the old, dry and stale statistics touching the State debt, and ran off a furious and funder opposition to free schools and to a free election franchise, and was about to proceed, some suspected, to other irrelevant matters, such as local opinion and dwelling laws, narrow gauge railroads and funder opposition to laws for the protection of terrapins upon public highways, when his time expired and to the relief of the whole audience he subsided. He omitted to say a word during the entire hour which by any possible construction could be taken as evidence to decide whether he was a republican or a democrat; but no word of eulogy for Hancock, whose name his party pretend to place at the head of his electoral ticket, and on the other hand no word of condemnation for radical corruption and misrule which all true democrats are now striving to suppress.

As stated in the outset of this letter, yesterday afforded the first opportunity our people have had to hear a discussion of issues in this canvass, and Mr. Seddon's exhibition of the claims of his party was all sufficient to show the people that the Mahonites are a mere collection of office-seekers, striving to delude the people, and without any claim to the support of true, honest and patriotic democrats. Such was the utter failure of this chosen champion of his party to make out a case, and so ridiculous was the attempt he made to make the State canvass a mere bore, that several leading Mahonites fled in shame, from the court house, when one of the boldest of them was met by this writer at the door and asked if he was one of that man's disciples, he thrice denied, with an oath, that he had any part or lot in the matter. And this, too, after this bold Peter, of the tribe of Mahone, had been most forward in securing a division of time for his champion in the outset of debate.

Whatever Mr. Seddon's speech failed to furnish as incentives to democrats to support the regular Hancock electoral ticket was fully supplied by Mr. Mushbach in his concluding speech of an hour and a half. One effect of Mr. Seddon's address had been to drive at least one half of the audience from the court room, but when Mr. Mushbach resumed it was a signal for return, and the audience was larger than at the opening of the debate. He proceeded to show that Mr. S. had followed the same course that all the greater lights of his party pursued in this canvass, using the same means to delude the people and draw them off upon false issues. He proved conclusively that he had no party was only a side show or assistant to the Garfield party. That they had, in the first place, sought to secure the nomination of Grant, who they intended to support openly, but failing in that they had, from mere policy, pretended to endorse the Cincinnati ticket so as to secure for themselves the electoral vote of Virginia, and at the last desperate of as they saw fit. He showed their shuffling and double dealing in treating with the State executive committee of the democratic party in the late noble effort made by the latter to secure an honorable compromise. In all this and many other points through which he passed the time ran yea the space to follow. Mr. Mushbach did not content himself with mere charges or bold assertions, but fully proved by the irresistible logic of facts the truth of all he alleged. I have never seen a more brilliant speaker, and debater, and I have yet to hear a speech more effective in its purpose than the one delivered here yesterday, by Mr. Mushbach; nor am I alone in this high estimate of Mr. M.'s abilities. The opinion is general that a more able and effective speaker never under the stars shined here. Hancock Mr. Mushbach will be a favorite with King George democrats. His masterly effort yesterday fully justified the designation given him by our county chairman when he introduced him as "Virginia's young and rising statesman."

DISCUSSION AT BEALTON.

The people of Lower Fauquier assembled at Bealton on Saturday to hear a public discussion of the political issues of the day.

General James H. Williams appeared on behalf of himself for Congress and the Mahonite electoral ticket, and Mr. Kent and Major R. Taylor Scott for the regular democratic ticket.

General Williams led off in a speech of 30 minutes, followed by Mr. Kent, who spoke for 15 minutes, and General Williams closed the discussion in a 30 minutes' speech.

General Williams made his usual and characteristic speech, ignoring all the real issues and bringing in all kinds of irrelevant matters in the vain effort to justify his position, in which, if the sentiment of the crowd was any index, he signally failed.

Mr. Kent was listened to with the strictest attention, and made many telling hits against General Williams, who retired after the discussion with five or six "faithful allies," and he will have by far more at this place on election day.

After the discussion, Major R. T. Scott being called for, made an earnest and effective speech, and the meeting adjourned.

MEETING AT THE PLAINS.

There was a "pole raising" and mass meeting at The Plains, in Fauquier county, on Saturday last, at which a large number of persons were present, including many ladies. The pole, one hundred feet high, was raised amidst great enthusiasm. The music was furnished by the Leezaband, and a salute was fired from a cannon brought from Warrenton. Able and eloquent speeches were made by Gen. W. H. Fane, G. A. Mushbach, J. V. Brooke and H. Shepherd. The feeling was most excellent, and there need be no fear that this part of Fauquier will not go all right for the regular ticket.

GRAND DEMOCRATIC RALLY IN CULPEPER.

The democrats of Culpeper county, together with many of the citizens of Madison, Rappahannock and Orange counties, had an immense barbecue at Boston, in Culpeper county, on Saturday. The crowd began to assemble as early as 10 o'clock, and by 12 o'clock it was estimated that there were upwards of a thousand persons present.

After some excellent music from the band, the meeting was called to order by Dr. Dabney Gray, etc., who introduced as the first speaker our candidate for Congress, Mr. John S. Barbour.

Mr. Barbour made a most excellent and practical speech, and produced a fine impression.

Hon. John T. Harris, of Rockingham, in a statesmanlike speech of over an hour, held the undivided attention of the audience.

Captain J. W. Foster, of Loudoun, then, in a pointed speech, reviewed the history of the republican party.

After Captain Foster's speech, an adjournment was had for dinner. There was the utmost profusion in the way of eatables and drinkables, and every one was well cared for by the active and vigilant committees of arrangements.

After dinner, Dr. S. H. Moffatt, of Rockingham, made an exceedingly able and instructive speech, which did much good.

Hon. S. C. Neale, of Alexandria, followed Dr. Moffatt in an eloquent and effective speech, which was enthusiastically received.

General J. G. Field, of Culpeper, and S. G. Brent, etc., of Alexandria, closed the meeting in terse and logical speeches.

The greatest good feeling existed, and the meeting was a grand success. There were but few readjusters present, and they kept "shady." Mr. Barbour will receive a large majority as any man who has run for Congress since the war in Culpeper, Rappahannock, Orange and Madison counties.

THE ORANGE MEETING.

A correspondent of the Richmond State writing from Gordonsville of the meeting there last Monday says: "Mr. John S. Barbour, the nominee of the democratic party for the Eighth congressional district, spoke for an hour, and although not claiming to be an orator or politician, yet explained himself relative to his position and his intentions so clearly and honestly that he won the hearts of his hearers, who testified their appreciation from time to time by cheering loudly."

When Mr. Barbour had finished S. C. Neale was so heartily called for that that gentleman was forced to come forward, and in a short, eloquent and touching speech thanked his many friends for their unanimous support, and bade them, as they respected him, to do all that lay in their power toward electing the regular nominee. Continuing, he said: "I bear this message—seven hundred and twenty readjusters of the city of Alexandria send greeting to you and bid that we stand side by side in one common purpose to elect Hancock and English and John S. Barbour." Greater enthusiasm could hardly be imagined than prevailed during the time that Mr. Neale spoke. At every pause cheer after cheer rent the air, showing that he has good cause to be proud of his popularity in this county.

A correspondent of the Whig says that Mr. Barbour made a plain, earnest, and very sensible speech of one hour.

TO-DAY'S TELEGRAPH NEWS.

Parnell & Co.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—A dispatch from Dublin states the Parnell demonstration at Cork to-day was the largest ever seen in that section of Ireland since the days of Daniel O'Connell and a curious incident occurred during the formation of the procession at Blarney. A body of Parnellians armed with revolvers compelled two members of the land league, Cronin and O'Brien, to leave their carriage and kept them in custody till the proceedings were over. They intended to arrest the president of the league, but as he was in Parnell's carriage they could not get at him. O'Brien and Cronin attempted to enter five different carriages but were violently ejected by the Parnellians who leveled revolvers at the chthonous leaguers with cries of "We have better men than you to sit beside Parnell."

Parnell in his speech declared that landlordism which was created for maintaining English rule in Ireland and for the interest of the few against the many must fall. Voices called out, "As Lord Mountmorris fell."

The Times in an editorial article this morning says: "Wherever Mr. Parnell and his fellow agitators go they leave the country in a flame behind them. Deeds of lawless violence are done which have not been witnessed in any other form, though not with the latter of their harangues and which they care to even pretend to disapprove afterwards. The land league has extended its organization to Great Britain, and branches have been and are being formed in several large towns. A series of meetings will be held in the winter throughout the country to extend the principles of the league."

One of the most famous buildings in the world, the old palace of the Tuileries in Paris, together with the structure in which is stored the artistic collection which is at once the pride and glory of France—namely the Museum of the Louvre—narrowly escaped destruction by fire on Saturday night. A Card.

I am a workman, a printer by trade, and as you surely are aware it, requires almost every cent that one of our craft can earn to keep body and soul together. I was educated some time since to leave my home in this city, and go to Charlottesville, Va., to pursue my vocation on an organ of the great readjuster party—the party which claims to be the friend of the workingman. After having been given assurances by the publishers, and Virginia advocates that my wages would be promptly paid, I worked faithfully for the best interests of my employers, the Albemarle Publishing Company, but on the day my wages became due, not a cent was paid, nor has been paid.

My object in this communication is simply to show the character of the leading men of the great readjuster party—a party that recognizes as its leaders the men who own the principal amount of stock in the Albemarle Publishing Company, among them being State Auditor, John E. Massey, and J. H. Hardin, Assistant Superintendent of the Penitentiary. My opinion is that the party whose leaders will attempt to defraud a workman, will give if able, the electoral vote of Virginia to the man or party who will pay the most money. I say to the craft throughout this State, for your own honor, the honor of your country and of the Old Dominion, vote for Hancock and English, represented by the men who were recognized at the Cincinnati convention.

I am most respectfully, v. v. v.,

WM. W. HALL, jr.

VIRGINIA BONDS.—J. A. Hambleton, of Baltimore Financial Circular of Saturday last says:

"Virginia bonds are steady and show about same figures as last week. Consols advanced between 5/8 and 3/4. The short interest in these bonds tends to keep prices firm, as the fractional decline there are numerous holders. They are also in demand for investment. Ten Forties advanced to 4 1/4. Both Consols and 10 40's are scarce and have every appearance of selling higher. Consol and 10 40's compared in and in demand at 9 1/4 for the former and 10 1/4 for the latter.
